This 28 year old patient was referred by her general dentist for endodontic therapy on tooth #20 due to symptoms of irreversible pulpitis. The patient was extremely fearful, and requested endodontic treatment under conscious sedation. She was evaluated and determined to be a healthy candidate.

Endodontic treatment was completed in a single visit under conscious sedation in our office. A permanent composite access seal was placed while the patient was still sedated. Sedation can be a great asset in treating high fear patients. The patient tolerated the procedure very well, and was extremely pleased.
